

Tom Caramanico
President,
McCormick & Taylor

Tom Caramanico has been the president of McCormick Taylor, Inc., an engineering company, since 1988. With 480 employees in 19 offices located in nine states, the firm specializes in transportation planning, environmental studies, traffic studies and highway and bridge design. Caramanico joined the firm in 1972 as a structural engineer and became president and CEO in 1988.

He is active in the community as he serves on numerous non-profit boards. He chairs the board of the Independence Visitor Center Corporation and serves as board member and volunteer Executive Director of the Independence Historical Trust. He also serves on the Boards of Drexel University and the Franklin Institute, Nuevo Esperanza in north Philadelphia, Freire Schools Collaborative and the 501c4 Excellent Schools PA. Caramanico and his family established the Caramanico Foundation and built the Caramanico School in rural Cambodia which educates 750 students from k through 9 th grade.

Caramanico earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees from Villanova University in civil engineering. He lives in Haverford PA.